Summary of Conclusions

If the Invincible agreement is accepted by all Bosnian parties, we will not claim a triumph for American diplomacy or describe the settlement as meeting all our wishes or principles. We will, however, note that American policies and actions have helped produce a better deal for Bosnia's Muslims and those who still want a multi-religious society than would otherwise have been the case. If accepted, the agreement can produce a situation that is better than another winter of war. (S)

Congressional Liaison Staffs of all agencies will telephone key Hill Staffers to (a) tell them what we know of the Invincible agreement; (b) note that new aspects of the agreement address key Bosnian government concerns (access to the Adriatic and links with Muslim-majority enclaves in eastern Bosnia); (c) say that while the Bosnian Parliament still must accept the agreement, if it does prove satisfactory to them, it would in our judgment be better than another winter of war. This will be done promptly, before Hill friends of Bosnia in particular make public statements critical of the agreement that could make it harder for them to support our role in implementation. (S)

During the Hill leadership consultations scheduled for Thursday, September 23, we will present our conditions for participating in implementation/enforcement. (OSD to provide written text Tuesday, September 21, for Principals' review.) (S)

Principals reaffirmed their earlier decision that we would welcome a Congressional resolution of support for U.S. participation in implementation/enforcement, and further agreed that it would be useful with Allies if the resolution contains our conditions for participation. NSC staff will revise its draft Congressional resolution accordingly. (S)

While we do not require prior Congressional approval for American participation, if Congress passes a resolution opposing it, we will not proceed. (S)

OMB will assess whether it is possible and/or desirable to combine a resolution supporting American participation with a supplemental. (S)

OMB and OSD will prepare a recommendation on funding options on Tuesday, September 21. (S)

DOD will reassess NATO plans for unified command throughout the FRY. (S)
