Summary of Conclusions

1. Deputies met September 29 to discuss post-settlement implementation. They agreed to defer discussion of economic reconstruction.
2. On American participation in IFOR, Deputies reaffirmed that our first priority is to ensure the integrity of military operations, i.e. NATO-led operation, unity of command, no dual key. Deputies agreed, however, that Russian participation in the IFOR was desirable. Deputies agreed that:

DECLASSIFIED
PER E.O. 13526

- we would prefer that Russian forces be under NATO operational control as part of one or more Allies' Area of Responsibility (AOR), rather than in a separate Russian AOR;
- we would prefer that, within the Allied AOR(s), Russian forces be given specific functional responsibilities.

3. Deputies agreed in principle to a fallback position of allowing the Russians to report to Deputy IFOR Commander Janvier in his dual-hatted capacity as Deputy UN Force Commander, upon assurances that Janvier does not have an independent reporting line to the UN regarding military matters. However, before broaching this with the Russians, we need to study further what was needed to ensure unity of command and no "dual key" under the Janvier option (Action: OSD/JCS). Based on that study, we would sound out the UN about the viability of this option (Action: USUN/State). Deputies agreed to postpone military talks between the JCS (Clark) and his Russian military counterpart, in light of the proposed Perry-Grachev meeting.

4. In view of Allied preferences for a stronger UN role in the implementation of the civilian aspects of the peace settlement, Deputies agreed we should define what constraints would be needed to define a narrow scope of responsibility and avoid organizational inefficiency in the event we agreed that the UN SYG could appoint the Senior Coordinator (Action: State/USUN).

5. With regard to the stabilization package, Deputies accepted a two-stage approach to arms control, i.e., the peace agreement would contain limited arms control measures (separation zones, continued no-fly zone) and a commitment by the parties to follow-on negotiations to establish equal ceilings on CFE categories of equipment. Deputies also recommended that the Principals look again at the equip and train decision. They agreed to prepare two options addressing a modest and a robust degree of U.S. engagement in equipping and training the Federation, in the context of a clearly defined end-state for the equip and train effort (Action: State). Based on the assumptions in the JCS paper on equipping and training the Federation, the deputies asked JCS to prepare a paper regarding how to implement an equip and train program (Action: JCS). The deputies also decided to defer sending an assessment team to the Federation at this time.
